TI is not clear what precise—
I ly is the job of Wing-Commander Ali Sabri. Described as "Chief of President Nasser's Political Bureau," this ex-officer has been outdistancing Colonel Nasser in the fierceness and extremism of his pronouncements, and some insinuating observers have gone so far as to claim that he acts as a kind of political god father to his nominal boss. His latest major statement came over the week-end. boss. His latest major statement came over the week-end. Referring to the rumours now circulating about the settlement of Arab refugees, he said that the Palestine question was "the exclusive concern of the scattered people of Palestine" and that therefore no Arab country was entitled to speak for the refugees; that "the people of Palestine alone can decide its own fate."

THIS departure from the view that the Arab States as a whole are the legitimate guardians of the Palestine problem has far-reaching implications. It is in reality a shrewd anticipation of the possibility that the Arab States most affected by the refugee problem would eventually act in unison to settle the refugees, with the exclusion of Egypt — and probably Syria. This exclusion would not be a real impediment: Nasser himself had only recently taken the Arab League by storm despite the obvious hosbe a real impediment: Nasser himself had only recently taken the Arab League by storm despite the obvious hostility of Iraq and the Lebanon. Now, there is nothing to prevent Iraq. Saudi Arabia, Jordan and the Lebanon—and possibly a more accommodating Syrian regime—from taking their own decision on the refugee question elaiming, with perfect justice, that they are the Arab States. In fact, the whole burden of the repeated denials issued last week by Saudi Arabia, Iraq and Jordan of reports of talks on refugee re-settlement was that no single Arab country was entitled to take action on this issue and that any decision will have to come from the Arab States as a whole,

HOWEVER that may be, the fact is that almost overnight and without much fuss the Palestine Refugee problem has ceased to be an exclusive Israel liability and became the concern of the Arab States where after all, it really belongs. It is a remarkable development brought about by a variety of reasons. The Egyptian Army's debacle in Sinai has convinced everyone, the refugees not excluded, that the Arab rulers had been feeding their populaces on totally false hopes of an inevitable return to the lost paradise; the coincidence that Iraq, the most prosperous of the Arab countries, now needs manpower to replace the agricultural hands streaming into the cities; the obvious interest of the contributing powers in seeing the refugees permanently settled—all these factors no doubt had their share in effecting the change. Yet all these are outshadowed by one important developbecame the concern of the Arab States where, after all, it ed by one important develop-ment. This is the realization on the part of the Arabs that their first and deadliest ene-my is now Communism, not Israel. After a brief flirtation Israel. After a brief fliritation with the dangerous toy, responsible Arab leaders have come to realize with what speed the Communist aweep can overtake their vulnerable countries. (They have Syria for an object-lesson.) They have also become convinced that the refugee camps provide the ideal breeding-ground for Communism.

vide the ideal breeding-ground for Communism.

The cynical exploitation of the refugees' misery had to stop because it simply didn't pay. Colonel Nasser, who seems to have reached the point where he has nothing much to lose, still thinks otherwise. This he can afford, because Egypt, though she has refugees living in the Gaza Strip, was the Arab country least burdened by the presence of these refugees. She has even used them to advantage in recruiting fedaycen squads from their ranks. The refugees themselves, who are of course the chief sufferers, know this well. Amid the welter of claims and denials which filled the Arab press and radio last week, the only sane voice came from the refugee camps. While Hussein and Feisal, conferring in Baghdad, were denying "charges" that they so much as thought of settling the refugees, one Tawfik Toukan, leader of the refugees in the Amman area, had the courage to send a cable to the two monarchs thanking them for their efforts to solve the refugee problem. Significantly, he added that the refugees means the refugees of the refugee problem. Significantly, he added that the refugees of the refugee problem.

draw the party in the direction of sectarianism.

Observers interpreted this as indicating that Mr. Kadar and his supporters had successfully survived a reported bid by "Stalinists" deposed from high party office since the rising to regain positions in the leadership.

Mr. Kadar, who was addressing more than 350 delegates at the first national conference of the seven-month-old Socialist Workers (Communist) Party, said they should not bargain with the enemy or talk with traitors.

Observers said this appeared to underline that the Government did not intend at present to broaden its ranks to include politicians of other parties who had cooperated with "nationalist" Communist, Mr. Imre Nagy, when he was Premier for a short time during the revoit.

Mr. Kadar was delivering a report by the Party Central Committee on the political aituation and the party's past. The new party was formed in November to succeed the former Hungarian Workers Party which disintegrated in the revolt.

The Premier said he was convinced that the present aituation in the party and its leadership was healthy, Meanwhile, Budapest Radio announced yesterday that four Hungarians, including a young woman, have been executed after being sentenced to death in trials arising from last year's uprising.

Aid for Refugees

On the refugees, he said:

The present Arab rulers don't consider the refugees as humans, only as a political weapon against Israel. When they are ready, Israel will be prepared to assist the solution by providing compensation, the benefits of our experience in absorbing refugees, and perhaps in other ways too. He would not say if Israel was now ready to accept the return of some refugees.

In our view, the only possible, practical and just solution is to resettle the Arab refugees in the underdeveloped, rich lands of Iraq and Syria where they will be among their own people.

Mr. Ben-Gurion saved his sharpest commenta for criticizing non-Israel Jews, Asked what his reaction is to a plea made earlier in the week by the American Jewish Committee delegation for an easing of military rule in Arab areas, the Prime Minister repaid the Committee in its own coin:

Glueck: Abraham's Date Wrong; 1st Patriarch was Not Nomad

Jerusalem Post Reporter
Abraham, the Patriarch, did not live later than the beginning of the J8th century RCE, and the period in which he lived in the Negav was one in which it was the most thickly populated by sedentary farmers in the whole history of Palestine, according to definite conclusions drawn by Prof. Nelson Glueck, the noted archaeologist.
Texta usually give the Abrahamic period as 1550 to 1450
B.C.E. Dr. Glueck added that, following his studies of ancient civilization in the Negev, he is also sure that Abraham could not have lived earlier than the 20th century B.C.E.
In a recent interview in Je-lier than the 20th century B.C.E.

In a recent interview in Jerusalem, the President of the Hebrew Union College said that the picture of Abraham as a nomad was faise. When the first Patriarch went through the Negev to Egypt during a famine he did not go through desert; he went through heavily populated, civilized country.

From the end of the 19th to the 10th centuries, Prof. Glueck said, there is a huge archaeological gap during which little or no life existed in the South. He has traced this gap all the way from Trans-Jordan into the Negev. No remains exist of this period.

No remains exist of this period.

A series of wars must have occurred at the end of the 19th century, and the existing towns and settlements must have been completely destroyed. The townspeople were either killed or ran away.

To substantiate his conclusions of the Abrahamic period Dr. Glueck pointed to the abundant archaeological evidence of life that exists in the Negev from the 21st to 19th centuries. In one week recently he found 10 new sites of habitation.

He also points to the advanced agricultural civilization of the period. Further, if there is any validity to the Bible stories — and he is certain there is — then it presupposes a civilization in the Negev.

Dr. Glueck also noted that the Negev sites were destroyed by the end of the 19th century B.C.E., and Abraham could not therefore have made his home there or even travelled through an uninhabited desert with his retinue.

found more evidence of pottery industry, trade, houses of stone and intensive agriculture dating back to the Abrahamie period.

Dr. Glueck has great faith in the present productive capacity of the Negev. In the interview he said that it never was a desert and that whenever energetic human beings went to work there and when there was peace, it bloomed. The area suffered "not because of the antics of nature but because of the nonsense of man."

Dr. Glueck will continue his investigations till the end of August.

Only 56.4 per cent of the student body turned out, however, to file their choics in the three-day referendum. A total of 1,578 (48.2 per cent of the entire student body) voted for direct elections, while 216 students voted to continue the resent party system. He has covered a great deal of ground since then, and even served for nearly two years in the same Cabinet as Mr. Ben-Gurion, his greatest opponent for years. Mr. Sapir, however, did not lay down his arms. He is now the economic expert of his party, and his theory could be conveniently summed up in the slogan: "Less control and more profit." ## South and Black Africa: Problems at Home and Abroad S.A. Whites Embarrassed by Ghana

THE African boycott movement of the Nationalist tobacco combine promises to be the most significant challenge to the forces of Afrikaner or Nationalism since the 1952 civil disobedience campaign. It has been launched by substantially the same bodies that organized the 1952 campaign—the African Nationalist of the Nat Aviv and Minister of the Interior, for long a parameter of the Interior, for long a parameter of the Interior, for long a parameter of the Commonservative - minded small-holders, has emerged the heaviest loser in the whole struggle. Mr. Rokach, at 61, and Mr. Bernstein, at 61, and Mr. Bernstein, at 61, and Mr. Bernstein, at 67, seem to be considered "too old" and not resolute enough by 55 per cent of the delegates. Mr. Sapir, who is 51, and Mr. Serlin, who is 51, and Mr. Serlin, who is just over 50, represent the "young" leadership.

The internal bickerings between the leaders of a rather small faction are of little public concern. However, the personnel changes at the top of the General Zionist Party assume a certain importance when considered in connection with disturbing developments elsewhere on the political front.

Mr. Sapir is a scion of a Petah Tikva plantation family which for half a century conducted a fierce battle against Jewish organized labour. Mr. Sapir himself was at the helm of the Inud Ezrahi, "the citizens" union," which some 15 years ago was a sare presentatives of a spread to the daily indignities to which partheids white Congress and the So uth African Coloured to the people of sovereign independent sister within the Commonwealth, Ghana's diplomats in the Union could not be dealth of a dignities to which partheid survive seems to be considered to the daily indignities to which partheid survive seems to be considered to touch." But the new economic boycost is avowedly political, and it presents the Nationalist Government — and in fact white South Africa — with a most awkward challenge.

Before this swoop could take place, however, the intervention of commerce and industry secured a truce, and the Government stayed its hand. Pressure from employers has since forced the Government to acknowledge the economic hardship which was the foundation of the bus boycott and to pass a law providing for a transport levy from all employers of African labour to subsidize bus aervices where necessary. This should lead to a final amicable settlement of the bus boycott.

Haboker remarks that the Histadrut's concern for the families that will be affected by Mr. Moller's insistence on efficiency dismissals is nothing when compared with what is bound to happen when inefficiency effectively hampers productivity. The Histadrut leadership would do well to remember the general needs of the country's economy at least as much as economy at least as much as they cherish the Haifa La-bour Council's prestige.

Davar (Histadrut) notes that the general agreement on arbitration just signed between the Histadrut and the Manufacturers Association stands out in glaring contrast to the stand maintained by the Ata director, who is attempting to reintrofluce early nineteenth-century usage. The two national federations have shown a high degree of public maturity and social sagacity and the new accord is a further step in the direction of improved relations between workers and employers.

WILL Jerusalem have a Water shortage this summer?

Will the first protracted heat spell leave the city gasping for water like a fish floundering on the beach? Theoretically, no. But this theory must be tested and proved during the hot months ahead, particularly August and September.

Today, the newly completed "parallel" line is pumping 22,000 cubic metres daily to the capital during hot weather. But Jerusalem's "sharav needs" soar above this figure, sometimes reach 25,000 cubic metres a day. (No one really knows what these requirements are, for they have never been met.)

The Municipality claims that the "parallel" line can handle 30,000 cubic metres a day, sufficient to meet every eventuality, and even to keep the 20,000 cubic metres a day, sufficient to meet every eventuality, and even to keep the 20,000 cubic metres a day, sufficient to meet every eventuality, and even to keep the 20,000 cubic metres a day, sufficient to meet every eventuality, and even to spells, the needs of agricultural settlements in the Corridor rise sharply if they want to save their crops from the searing sun.

This takes precedent over the desire of a Jerusalemite to stand leisurely under a cool shower during a heat wave. And furthermore, if the past is any indication of the future, the "parallel" line is liable to develop a series of mechanical defects, or have a major breakdown, in hot weather. The old Mandatory line is no longer in use.

He will oppose the Histadrut more violently than Mr. Bernstein, whose approach is considered rather academic by the down-to-earth General Zionists.

It would appear that this uncompromising attitude will fall on fertile ground just now with Mr. Hans Moller, of Ata, fighting the Histadrut on what he considers matters of principle rather than practical be-concentration from the first phrase. His technique is extraordinarily well founded, his howing and the seemingly effortless handling of the enormous difficulties point here to a new star on the violinists firmament. It is to be hoped that Rabin will revisit us in the near future and will appear in solo recitals too.
